

Ethical Reflection (120–180 words)

In creating the campaign, I used AI as a tool to generate visuals and draft narratives, but I made the final decisions about tone, message, and audience. This balance ensured that authorship remained collaborative rather than outsourced. I was careful to avoid stereotypes by focusing on diverse, authentic representations of creators and playmakers, ensuring the imagery reflected real community values. Any factual claims, such as contact details or mission statements, were verified before inclusion to maintain accuracy. Importantly, no personal data or real faces were used without consent; all visuals were symbolic and original, designed to protect privacy while still inspiring connection. To keep the work distinct, I guided AI with intentional prompts rooted in the foundation's mission, rather than relying on generic templates. Ultimately, the campaign reflects a responsible practice of ethical AI—uplifting creativity while respecting fairness, originality, and community trust.